Where Wilson Was Proposed

It was at such a dinner, as usually and so she resigned in order that her chiefly planned by Mr. Lawrence, that successor might be appointed before Col. George Harvey arose one night and successor might be appointed before the school year began.

But Chicago would not have it so. Mrs. Young was triumphantly reelected in December after a struggle which made Mayor Harrison temand the resignations of four members of the Board of Education unfriendly to her. The particular enmity she roused sprang from a coterie of book men whose text books had been discontinued, but whose lobbyists would not down easily. Mrs.
